5	J. Reading Comprehension: Read the following passage and answer the questions as required. * Most people probably spend more time thinking about weather than about climate. Although weather and climate are closely related, climate is different from weather. Weather refers to the temperature and amount of rain, wind, sun, and snow during a specific time. On the other hand, climate refers to the typical weather patterns of an area over many years. So, climate is a long view of weather. Several natural factors determine the climate of an area. They include the amount of heat an area receives from the sun, the distance it is from the equator, if the land is flat or mountainous, and how close it is to a body of water. For these reasons, places that are far away from each other may have similar climates and places that are close to each other may have different climates.
